

Question 1

No one example makes this case convincingly because each alone could indicate something else: e.g. high death rates could simply be a result of disease; high rents might reflect harsh landlords. Arguably a discussion combining all four would be best.

Question 2

c) doesn't really make this point convincingly, and d) is not evidence, but arguably a combination of a) and b) will do, with specific examples to reinforce.